THE DESCENDANTS OF JAMES STAFFORD

by

CORNELIA WEARN HENDERSON

Foreword

This information concerning the descendants of James Stafford is not intended to be a complete and finished work. It is only a beginning so that others who come later may have certain facts available to them in one booklet. It is not always easy to locate information that was at one time available. Family records are sometimes destroyed because a person does not realize their value. In some cases furniture, containing papers, is sold at auction to settle an estate and these records are lost to the family. In the days before fire fighting equipment many records and letters were burned with the building that housed them. So that early papers may be read by the public, recently, photostatic copies of early deeds, wills and other records have been made and are available in county court houses to those who will take the time to search through them for material.

Fortunately there are still many records available concerning this Stafford family from which information has been gleaned. Beginning with the census of 1790, we have used the records of Rocky River Church, family Bibles, markers in cemeteries, deeds and wills as recorded in Mecklenburg and Cabarrus County Court Houses, and the information concerning living people as sent in by individuals. Especially authoritative are the original records as preserved and handed down from generation to generation and are now in the doll trunk at the home of Mrs. Zeb Stafford at Harrisburg, North Carolina. These early land grants and deeds were kept by the individuals after first being recorded at Wilmington and later in the Mecklenburg Court House. We find many copies of records in the court records for which we do not have the originals.

There have been some difficulties in trying to connect information about individuals as found in different records. For example the name Jean and Jane is used interchangeably for the same person. The name Eli was pronounced A-ley by some as was done by people telling me about my great grandfather. As a result of this pronunciation we find in one legal paper that Martha Scott paid Aleys Stafford $400.00. On another occasion Samuel Kimmons and Elihu Stafford signed a legal paper. All of these names referred to the same person.

Later information has been obtained from living members of the family. If there are mistakes and discrepancies it is because our efforts did not bear fruit.

It is my wish that each of you will add information and thereby receive the pleasure that has been mine in bringing it to you thus far. Please send me a copy of the additions so that I, too, may keep my information up-to-date.

WHY ARE WE HERE

Have you, the descendants of James Stafford, ever asked yourselves why the Staffords are in this part of North Carolina or what type of people these early Staffords were? In order to better understand who we are and why we are here we will have to think back to the seventeenth century.

At this time it was customary for the ruler who occupied the English throne to determine the State Religion. Elizabeth I being a member of the Anglican Church made it the established church of Ireland, which was Catholic. In order to more firmly establish her authority in this recently conquered territory she gave much of the northern section to English nobles who in turn encouraged Scottish families to settle there. This was the beginning of a great migration from Scotland to Ireland. During the decade from 1610 to 1620, 40,000 Scotch Presbyterians were thus settled in Ulster. They were among the most industrious, thrifty and intelligent people of the world. In Ulster they grew wheat and flax, raised cattle and sheep, and began the manufacture of linen and woolen cloth which they were soon exporting to England.

However there were many trying experiences over a period of more than a century. Constant friction with the dispossessed Irish; restrictions placed on tillage and raising of rents, unfairly, by the absentee landlords; crop failures over a period of time; all these contributed to the discouragement and dissatisfaction of the Scotsmen. Another grievance arose when the staunch Scotch Presbyterians were required to pay tithes for the support of the Anglican Church. Discouraged and exasperated by these experiences many people began to look for new homes across the sea.

Thus the so-called Scotch-Irish, who were not Irish at all, began to come to America. A few settled in the New England Colonies, thousands remained in Pennsylvania and others pushed on down through the Valley of Virginia to the foothills of Carolina.

The road which the Scotch-Irish took from Pennsylvania into North Carolina ran from Philadelphia through Lancaster and York in Pennsylvania, to Winchester in Virginia, down the Shenandoah Valley, thence southward across the Dan River to the Yadkin, Rocky and Catawba river sections. In 1775 Governor Dobbs, writing of seventy-five families who had settled on his lands along Rocky River said, "They are a colony from Pennsylvania, of what we call Scotch-Irish Presbyterians who settled with others in the neighboring Tracts who had settled together in order to have a teacher (i.e. minister) of their own opinion and choice."

They came by groups of families but since they were agriculturists they soon became widely scattered. As early as 1740 there were scattered families along the Hico, Eno and Haw Rivers; but the region chiefly settled by them was that which later became Mecklenburg, Granville, Orange and Rowan counties. Mecklenburg was the center of the Scotch-Irish settlement for it was there the 100,000 acres was owned by Arthur Dobbs, who together with another governor of North Carolina, Matthew Rowan, encouraged the Scotch-Irish to leave their old homes in Ulster, as they themselves had done, and come to Carolina. They were domestic, home-loving small farmers, who were outwardly cold and austere yet they held dear the ties of relationship. The firmness which held them to their convictions tended to make them narrow-minded. They paid strict attention to the worship of God and the right to choose their religious teachers led to the demand of exercising the same privilege to their civil rulers. Their democratic ideals were soon felt throughout the colony and the surrounding people were dominated by their moral, religious and political principles. Among these settlers who loved home and family, were deeply religious, law-abiding, as long as the laws were to their liking, and self-reliant was James Stafford.

In the early papers of James Stafford the name of Arthur Dobbs appears many times. In 1753 Arthur Dobbs was appointed governor of North Carolina. Before this in association with Henry McCulloh, Murray Crymble, James Huey and others he had embarked upon a vast scheme. Upon their petition, an order in Council was issued, May 19, 1737, under which warrants for 1,200,000 acres were allowed them to be located in the back country chiefly along the Yadkin, the Eno, and the Catawba rivers. Under the terms of his grant, McCulloh, was to settle within it a large number of "Substantial people" who were "to carry on the Pott Ashe Trade" and to raise" hemp and other naval stores". As late as 1754, McCulloh had actually settled but 854 people within his grant. Innumerable difficulties arose, especially in Mecklenburg and Anson counties, between his agents and the people. There were disputes over boundary lines, quit rents, and titles, which led to frequent riots and bloodshed, and finally in 1767, forced McCulloh and his associates to surrender their grants to the Crown.

Before they surrendered their grants McCulloh, in 1765, donated a tract of three hundred and sixty acres of land to John Frohock, Abraham

Alexander and Thomas Polk, as commissioners, to hold in trust for the county of Mecklenburg, on which to erect a court house, prison and stocks. This became the city of Charlotte. McCulloh was the agent of Augustus Selwyn, who owned several immense tracts of land on a grant from the king, making it obligatory upon him to settle them with an average of one person to every 200 acres.

It was from this grant of John Selwyn inherited by his son George Augustus Selwyn and handled by Henry Eustus McCulloh that James Stafford bought his original tract of 2,008 acres. The original land grant is among the Stafford papers and is reproduced in this booklet.

We have every reason to believe that James Stafford was a man of means. As we have seen many of the people who came to this region about the same time could not even pay the quit rent on the land on which they settled. This rent amounted to a few cents a year, "three shillings sterling or four shillings proclamation money for every hundred acres", being about one cent per acre per year. The deed given James Stafford shows he paid twenty pounds sterling at the time.

Another proof of his prosperity is recorded in the records of Rocky River Church according to Thomas Spence. "The call made out for his (John Makemie Wilson) services gives definite indication of the identity of certain of the leading members of Rocky River—and contributes as substantially to an understanding of the financial aspects of church support at the beginning of the Nineteenth Century. This document bore signatures of 119 persons and promised an annual salary of $319.75. The largest subscription set down upon the call was $6.00 with ten of the underwriters obligating themselves for that sum each year. Four pledged $5.00 each while James Stafford subscribed $4.50."

The records further substantiate our opinion. "Garrett Meade and George Meade of Philadelphia received 88 pounds 10 shillings and six pence halfpenny lawful money of Pennsylvania unto us in hand paid by James Stafford of Mecklenburg County, in the colony of North Carolina, merchant. October 6, 1763."

Deeds registered in the Court House in Concord show that James Stafford continued to buy property. Fifty acres were purchased in 1795, and forty-three additional acres were bought in 1798.

The first Federal Census was made in 1790 and shows:

The only child of Franklin Stafford who lived to maturity was Cynthia Moore Stafford. She was never married. Her will included many members of the family as legatees and a copy is included in this booklet.

James Stafford and James B. Stafford were among the twenty-five young men enrolled as students in the academy at Rocky River Church and who later became ministers. This was during the time that John Makemie Wilson was minister and teacher at that church.

The University of North Carolina Alumni History, 1795-1924, lists James Stafford, Minister of Rowan County, Presbyterian as receiving an A.B. degree in 1821. His father estimated the cost of his education to be $1,500.00.

James Stafford sent a legal paper to his brother Franklin Stafford as agent to handle his inheritance from their sister Tirzah A. Kimmons, deceased. At this time James Stafford lived at McComb, Illinois, McDonough County, February 27, 1839.

According to the records of Pascal George Stafford, son of James Stafford, the family moved to Paris, Tennessee, in 1831, from there to Bond County, Illinois, in 1835. They lived in Greenville, Bond County for many years. James Stafford was a Presbyterian preacher and had pastorates in Paris, Tennessee, and in Greenville, McComb, Mt. Carmel, Carlyle, Sugar Creek, Trenton and DeQuoin, Illinois.

Tirzah A. Stafford Kimmons left a very interesting will which is included in this booklet. She left money for markers (cemetery) for her father, mother, step-mother, brother Franklin and his two wives and three children. At this time Franklin was still living and later married Mary Caldwell. Franklin and his first two wives, and three children have markers in the Stafford graveyard but wife Mary Caldwell Stafford has no marker, if she is buried there.

III. Jane Stafford

We have not been able to trace Jane. She must have been living in 1805 since the will of her father was made in that year and she is mentioned in it. She is not listed as a part of this household in the census of 1790 which would indicate that she was married and a part of another household.

The Morrison family has been developed in THE MORRISON FAMILY by Lore and Morrison so we will follow through with only one line because of the connection with the Stafford family. This will be done through the third child of this union, Elizabeth Catherine Morrison, who married Sandy McKinley. Two of the daughters of this couple married two sons of Eli and Eliza McCombs Stafford.

In order to preserve the information that we have concerning the McKinley family we will insert it here. It is important to us because Sandy was a descendant and because of the house that John McKinley built. The records show that the first two generations spelled the name McKindley.

David McKinley was from Ireland, coming to Pennsylvania and thence to North Carolina. He was among those Scotch-Irish Presbyterians who came about the middle of the eighteenth century.

One of the early houses with which the family is associated and which is in good repair today is the one occupied by May Stafford Quay and the son and grandson of the late Mary Stafford Quay. We do not know the date of the construction of this house. However we do know that John McKinley, who was born in 1764 and died in 1827, lived in the house.

Tradition is that the logs were cut and the planks sawed and dressed on the place. The first house was a square log structure of two stories. Outside stairs led to the upper level and the entrance was through the present door above the lower entrance, which is in the center of the front side.

The chimney was in the middle of the left wall with a huge fire place on the first floor and a smaller one on the second floor.

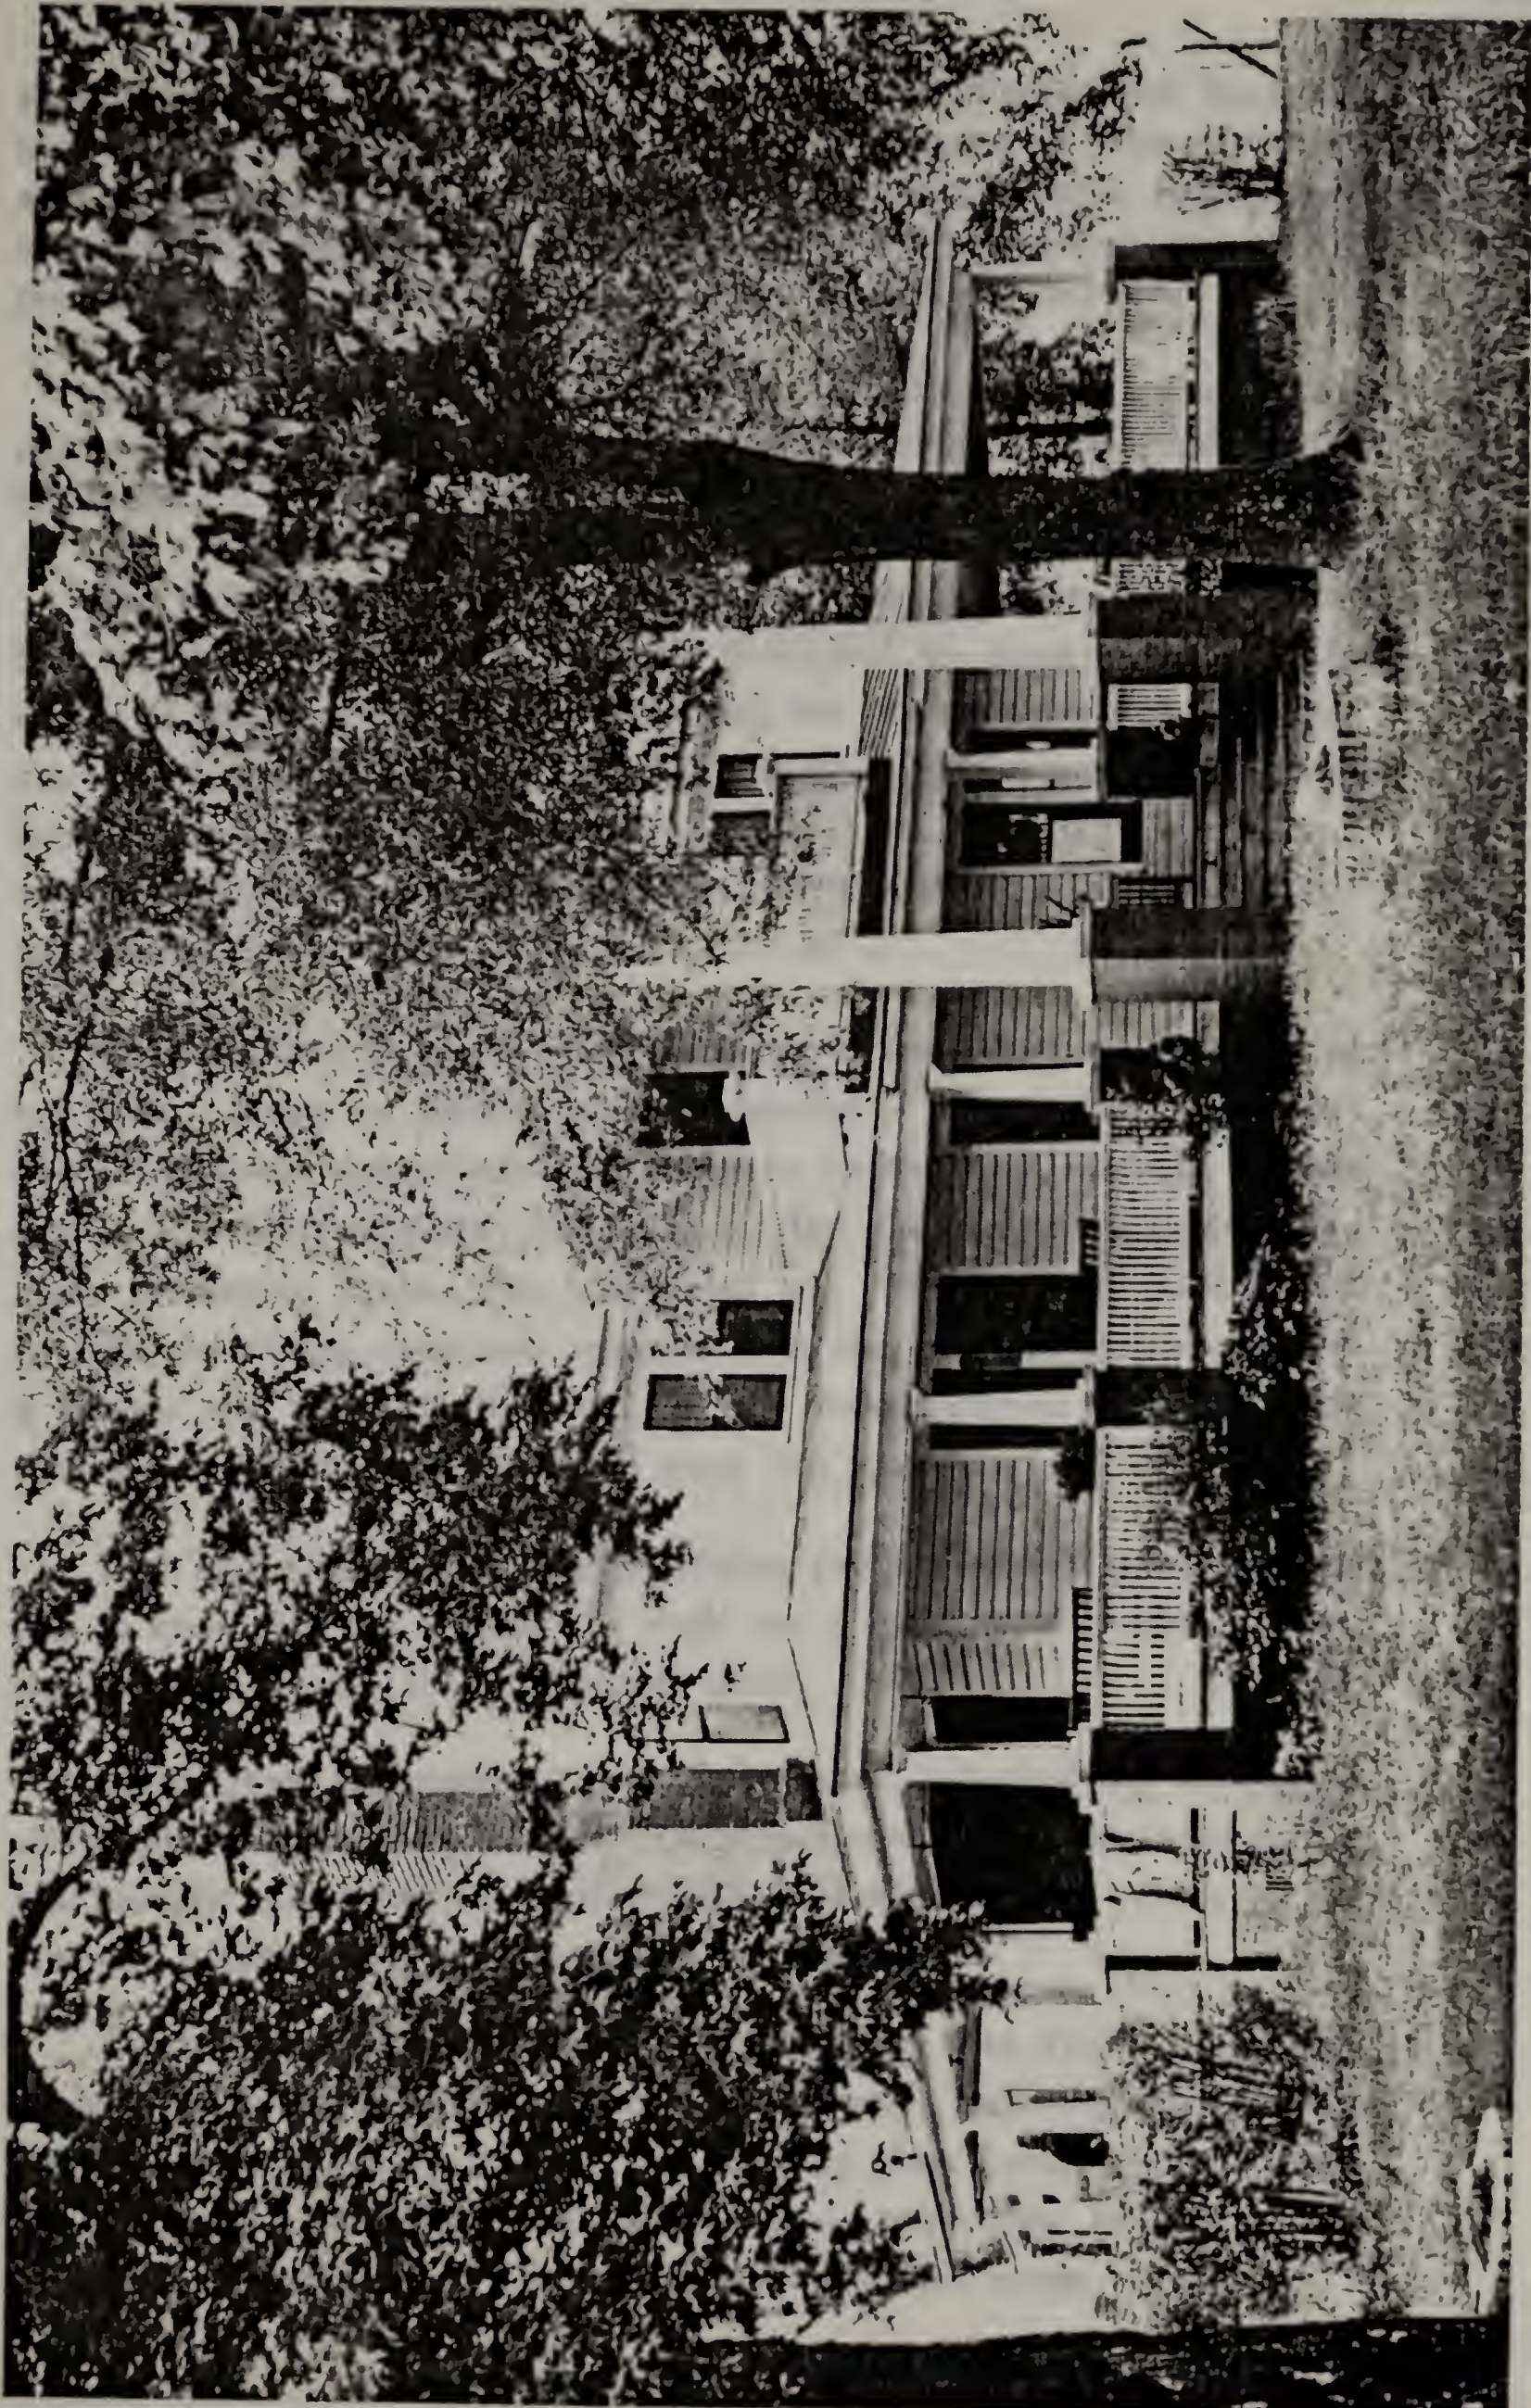

Probably one of the most interesting and unusual features of the house was the rainbow ceiling of the second story. The planks were soaked in water then bent and held in a vice until dry. As a result the half circle of the ceiling is unbroken by angles. As far as the family knows there is only one other local house with such a ceiling and this is the old Dr. Grier house at Rocky River, built originally by Rocky River Sam Pharr.

The planks for sealing the house on the inside and for the flooring are long enough so that there are no seams.

As was the custom the kitchen was a separate building at the rear of the main house. Cooking was done on an open fire in iron vessels.

John McKinley's son Sandy was the next head of the household. He married Ann Allison Hope and later Elizabeth Catherine Morrison. He had a second cabin built next to the kitchen and this was used for a school. He employed a teacher to instruct his twelve children. This person lived in the home.

When the house was done over in 1840 a dining room was added to the rear of the house. Also with a dividing wall a hall was cut off from the large room and an inside stairway was built. Later on a dining room was attached to the left wall of the house, at a lower level, and the kitchen was moved to the opposite end of this room. The well was at the far side of the kitchen under a covered porch. Uncle Bob, Robert Clark Cochran McKinley, is credited with the construction of this addition. That is of special significance to me since it is the only tangible contribution that he made to the family. He was far better known for his marvelous tales of daring as a soldier and spy in the Confederate Army and later with Jesse James when the West was wild and wooly. In each of his stories there was always the hero who saved the day and that hero was Bob McKinley.

With the addition of a dining room the former small room in the rear was used as a bed room. A parlor was added to the right side of the big room.

The third head of this household was Samuel McKee Stafford who married Mary Cornelia McKinley. He purchased the home place from the widow of Sandy McKinley. It was during his life that many of us visited our grandparents there. One of the pastimes enjoyed by children was bouncing on the joggling board. This very long board on its two supporting uprights stood on the porch against the wall then and the same one is still there today.

Mary Stafford Quay inherited the property and house on the death of her father. There her children and the children of May Stafford Quay have lived. Under the industrious hand of Aaron Foster Quay, husband to these first cousins Mary and after her death to May, the land was improved and made productive again. The house also was renovated and modernized. In 1926 the dining room was removed from the side and a new one with a kitchen was added to the rear. A first floor bedroom and bath were included in the changes. A second story bed room was also added.

With all the changes the rainbow ceiling remains intact. It is interesting also to know that the original log walls are so solid that present day carpenters were unable to cut through them.

Lloyd Quay, the present owner of the house, inherited the industrious and ambitious nature of his father. This together with his unbounded energy has brought about further improvement in the land. The results of his scientific planting have thus beautified the whole area.

The history of a house is made by the people who live in it. And so we have the house of John McKinley, his son Sandy McKinley, his daughter Mary Cornelia McKinley Stafford, her daughter Mary Letitia Stafford Quay, her son Lloyd Lester Quay and his son Lloyd Lester Quay Jr. Six generations of a sturdy family in a strong, substantially built house.

James-James Jr.-Eli-Elizabeth Caroline Stafford

C. Elizabeth Caroline Stafford b. 6-12-1839, d. 1919. Buried 12-8-1919. m. 8-22-1855 John March Springs b. 1832, d. 1865
Elizabeth Caroline Stafford was reared by her aunt Mary McKee Stafford Morrison and Samuel Morrison her husband. Later she lived with her mother's sister Matilda Caroline McComb Wilson and her husband Charles Wilson. According to tradition Elizabeth Caroline Stafford Springs is credited with designing the first Confederate soldiers cap.

John March Springs was a brother of Richard, Sally Springs Yates, Mary Springs Wriston, Alice Springs and Margaret Springs Kelly. He was a student at the University of North Carolina from 1852-1855 and was a member of Beta Theta Pi there. Elizabeth Ebeltoft has an invitation that John Springs sent to Elizabeth C. Stafford inviting her to a fraternity dance. It was addressed to her at Hornets Nest, North Carolina. John M. Springs was a Captain in the Confederate States Army.

Mary Blakeney Stafford retired June 1, 1957, after forty-seven years of devoted teaching. In addition to educating hundreds of other children, she successfully reared and helped educate her ten younger brothers and sisters, even taking the one-year-old sister to school while she taught.

She began teaching in Mecklenburg County in 1910 in a one-room schoolhouse and completed her career in 1957 also in Mecklenburg County, her native county. Thirty-five years in between were spent in Mooresville schools where she is lovingly remembered by all as "Miss Mary".

Summers were usually spent attending summer school at various colleges keeping her teacher certificates up-to-date.

Surely no one has ever put more love and sincerity into a profession than Mary Stafford.

1. The first part of the paper is devoted to the study of the properties of the function $f(x)$ defined by the equation $f(x) = \int_0^x f(t) dt$. It is shown that $f(x)$ is a constant function, and its value is determined by the initial condition $f(0)$.

2. In the second part, we consider the problem of finding the maximum value of the function $f(x)$ on the interval $[0, 1]$. It is shown that the maximum value is attained at $x = 0$ and is equal to $f(0)$.

3. The third part of the paper is devoted to the study of the properties of the function $f(x)$ defined by the equation $f(x) = \int_0^x f(t) dt$. It is shown that $f(x)$ is a constant function, and its value is determined by the initial condition $f(0)$.

4. In the fourth part, we consider the problem of finding the maximum value of the function $f(x)$ on the interval $[0, 1]$. It is shown that the maximum value is attained at $x = 0$ and is equal to $f(0)$.

James Biggers Stafford was one of the two Stafford young men who attended the academy at Rocky River Church and studied under John Makemie Wilson and who later studied for the ministry.

The following information has come to me:

“James Biggers Stafford. Wife was a daughter of Robert Hanna of York District, S. C. Licensed by Harmony Presbytery in 1821: Stated supply of Purity Church 1821-23; ordained, June 7, 1824 by Harmony Presbytery; original member of Bethel Presbytery, October, 1824; pastor of Concord and Purity churches, 1824-34; without charge in Tombeckbee Presbytery, Mississippi, 1834-40; stated supply of New Hope church, 1841-42; domestic missionary in Chickasaw Presbytery, 1843; stated supply of Bethany church, 1844-46; stated supply of New Hope church, Danville, Mississippi, 1847-53; and at the same time of Bethany church during 1848-53; infirm, Danville, 1854-62; died at Danville on May 8, 1862.”

THE HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES

The history of the United States is a story of the growth of a great nation from a small colony of English settlers. The first settlers came to the New World in 1492, and they were followed by many others. The United States has a long and rich history, and it is a story that is still being written. above named persons anxious to enjoy the means of grace in a regular way according to their wish were organized by Rev. J. B. Stafford into Presbyterian Church, the Confession of faith being adopted as the standard of their faith and practice. Resolved that this church be called New Hope. Jacob Hinkle being an ordained Elder was elected and installed. The Rev. Stafford was chosen Stated Supply. During this year and 39 and 40 several children were baptised 2 for J. Hinkle, 2 for Mayers and 1 or 2 for A. Sloan.

On account of age and ill health the Rev. James B. Stafford, resigned the charge of this church: And Rev. Ramsay Henderson on being sent to this county as a missionary took charge of it. H. S. Stafford, Clerk of Session."

This information was sent to me on February 1, 1956, by Mr. R. C. Hudson, Clerk of Session, New Hope Presbyterian Church. The church is located 8 miles south of Corinth, Mississippi, in the community of Biggersville. I was there on August 6, 1957, and visited the New Hope Church. It is a neat and attractive white frame building surrounded by a grove of large trees.

We might assume that Margaret Stafford, who was present for the organization of the New Hope Church, was Margaret Hanna Stafford. We know that James Biggers Stafford married a Miss Hanna. The H. S. Stafford, who recorded the minutes of the session, has not been identified. The telephone director for Corinth and the rural section nearby did not include the name Stafford.

Elizabeth Ebeltoft thinks there were two children, Frederick and Alice.

Deed of land—August 26, 1836—from Samuel M. Stafford of South Carolina to Eli Stafford. "It being the lott of land which was alloted to the said Samuel M. Stafford, on the partition of the lands, of James Stafford amongst his heirs at law."

Professor Samuel M. Stafford held the chair of ancient languages at the University of Alabama from 1837 to 1856.

"Samuel M. Stafford seems to have had the instincts of a teacher. For years before coming to Alabama, he had been the master of a flourishing boys' boarding school at Winnsborough, South Carolina. It is said that the trustees chose him for chair of ancient languages in 1837 not only because of his high reputation as a classical scholar but also because the pupils he prepared for South Carolina College made such excellent college records. Although he was a native of North Carolina, his alma mater was South Carolina. He was on the University campus 19 years."

President Clark wrote of him: "By his accurate scholarship his many private virtues, his official fidelity and ability, he gained the unqualified admiration of all who were ever associated with him."

One of his students, George Little, wrote of him: "His health failed—and he had to give up his work. His wife, who had been Miss Maria Brooks, then bought the old Presbyterian Female Institute and for several years conducted it under the name of Stafford School. This was the building that was finally bought by the city and used as a public school and still retains its old name of Stafford School. This school was established about 1840 by ten Presbyterians who gave one thousand dollars each for the building".

This school was torn down during 1954 to make room for a new hotel. However, a new grammar school has been built and named Stafford School. The hotel opened on December 15, 1956 and is called Hotel Stafford. It has one hundred and fifty outside rooms and is described, "with the latest advancements in hotel design and a sweeping panorama of beautiful Tuscaloosa in any direction."

This information was sent to me by Mrs. Camille M. Johnson and Mrs. Ruth J. Mayfield, Editors, Alumni Publications, University, Alabama. The information about Samuel McKee Stafford was taken from Dr. J. B. Sellers'

HISTORY OF THE UNIVERSITY OF ALABAMA.

This Will was recorded in the office of the Clerk of Superior Court 8-19-1885

So few families in this part of North Carolina had slaves and a high percent of the slaveholders had only one slave. Cynthia names six former servants in her will and they all bear the Stafford name which indicates they were former slaves.

Among the items willed to individuals are the set of six silver spoons that Franklin Stafford willed to his daughter and she in turn willed to Cora Elizabeth Stafford (Alexander). The latter has them at the present time. They are dainty light weight spoons engraved "F.S.". The story is that they were made from silver dollars sent to a Philadelphia silversmith by Franklin. At that time much of the flat silver was made from silver dollars and thereby called "coin silver".

There are several graves in this cemetery which are marked by field stones. Since the land is a part of the original grant we might assume that the early members of the Stafford family are buried there. There are no stones bearing the Stafford name in the Spears Graveyard which would be the only other place in which they might be buried.
